

NATHASHA S. MORRIS

PERSONAL STATEMENT

I am drawn to the intersection of philosophy, politics, and law because each asks how people, institutions, and societies can make decisions that are fair and ethical. My experiences in government, legal settings, public service, and the study of philosophy have strengthened my interest in understanding not only how laws and policies are created, but how they can be used to serve others and create meaningful change. I hope to bring to college a perspective grounded in intellectual curiosity, civic engagement, and a commitment to using ideas in service of people and communities.
